

ISO 37001 CERTIFICATION

ANTI-BRIBERY MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS CERTIFICATION

Introducing a new standard that addresses bribery and helps organizations eradicate it from their practices.

Bribery and other forms of corruption are still present in organizations, and in order to address a growing need for transparency in today's global marketplace, a new standard, ISO 37001, has been introduced to tackle bribery within an organization. Many businesses don't know how address corruption in their operations, ISO 37001 will provide a framework for compliance that will assist in anti-bribery efforts.

The standard includes clauses for assessment and management, leadership, planning, due diligence of personnel, continuous monitoring for improvement, and transparency.

Your challenges, our solutions

Bribery can occur and is difficult to detect - particularly the supply chain. Once identified, bribery can severely damage a company's reputation. According to an ethics & compliances study conducted by Price Waterhouse Cooper, approximately one in five (18%) of all respondents reported us they knew of no formal ethics and compliance programme in place in their companies. This admission illustrates a need for businesses to put programs that in place to mitigate risk by implementing oversight and processes to eliminate bribery

Benefits of an anti-bribery management system

Implementing an anti-bribery management system has many benefits for the organization and its stakeholders. These benefits include:

- Proactively combating bribery and corruption
- Developing a culture of integrity, transparency, openness, and compliance
- Developing fair, transparent, and efficient operations
- Enhancing the trust in and credibility of the operations
- Enhancing the quality of product and services assuring reliability of the business processes and business resilience.
